As a stakeholder in our community, it is important to realize that child abuse has many long term significant effects on our community. According to a report published in the Mental Health Journal in 2001 by C. J. Newton, MA, Learning Specialist...

"Even a simple economic analysis demonstrates enormous direct costs: medical care for injuries; medical care for the long term effects on survivors; mental health care for survivors; substance abuse treatment for survivors; mental health treatment for abusers; criminal justice system costs for police intervention, arrests, prosecution, and incarceration; legal system costs for lawyers and judges and courtrooms; costs to our educational system for special education services and counseling services; and social service costs for shelters, foster care, emergency housing, and case workers."

"A closer look reveals hidden costs that may dwarf the direct costs discussed above. How much damage is done to our Gross Domestic Product every year due to the lost productivity in the work force alone? What is the cost of the lost potential of millions of children? What is the cost of human suffering of the child or of the family? What is the cost to our society of our turning a blind eye? How much does it cost a society to look away from the suffering of it's children?"

With your help, we can work to ensure that these innocent child victims receive the help and support they need so that their futures become bright and do not reflect the grim realities that result from the terrible wrongs that have been committed against them. Help us work to ensure that child abuse victims in our community grow up to be the viable, responsible contributors they deserve to be and that we NEED them to be!
